I'm a progressive independent, and I intend to put schools and jobs at the top of my agenda. I spent the last two decades building over 60 Bay Area businesses, generating thousands of good jobs in the innovation economy. I was able to find success by focusing on practical ideas where the cutting edge meets common sense. I've taken the same approach as a mother, mentor, college educator and advocate for public school reform.

I promise one thing from the outset: My campaign is going to be rooted in the neighborhoods. It's going to be a campaign of ideas – yours and mine. Over the next few months I am going to be reaching out – and listening – in every neighborhood and every community of San Francisco
